E390 Integrating Emergency Management Education into Your Institution
Emergency Management Institute
Federal Emergency Management Agency, U.S. Department of Homeland Security

August 13-14, 2012

Emergency Management Institute, National Emergency Training Center Emmitsburg, MD

The Emergency Management Institute (EMI), in partnership with the White House Initiative on Tribal Colleges and Universities (WHITCU), is hosting the E390 Integrating Emergency Management Education into Your Institution By-Invitation. This course was formerly titled, "Emergency Management Planning, Preparedness, Training and Education for Colleges and Universities." The desired outcome and single focus of the new course is to achieve a more diverse population of emergency management (EM) professionals who reflect the communities in which they live and work.

This 2-day course is targeted for Tribal Colleges and Universities (TCUs) Department Chairs of EM-related disciplines such as sociology, geography, public administration, or psychology. The primary goal of the workshop is to assist TCUs by providing information about EM and the benefits and resources available for integrating EM course offerings. It is an interactive workshop focused on creating an action plan to be applied within each participant's academic department. Participants will discuss issues surrounding minority and minority-serving institutions of higher education and will begin the process of identifying and overcoming institutional roadblocks to increasing their schools' EM-related offerings.

The course will be held on the campus of the Federal Emergency Management Agency's National Emergency Training Center (NETC) in Emmitsburg, Maryland – about 75 miles northwest of Washington, DC.

The course is scheduled to begin at 8 a.m. on Monday, August 13, and conclude at 5 p.m. on Tuesday, August 14, 2012.
