

Use of EMI Course Curricula by external agencies, organizations, and individuals

Summary Emergency Management Institute (EMI) curriculum materials for independent study courses may be downloaded through EMI's training website, <http://training.fema.gov/IS/>. Unless otherwise indicated in the course materials, under 17 USC § 105 these government produced materials are not afforded copyright protection and are within the public domain.

Changes to original EMI content are not authorized by EMI. Proper attribution should be made to EMI and the U.S. Government as the source of the material when used or displayed. When using EMI curriculum materials or portions there of, agencies, organizations and individuals should cite EMI as the originator of the material. The materials should not be used or displayed by non-federal entities in a manner or way which states or implies endorsement of a user's products or services by the Federal Government.

---

Reference Styles In referencing EMI curricula use the following formats. The Reference style is used to alphabetically list items at the end of a paper or document. The In-Text style is used for the same items referred to within the body of the paper or document.

Modern Language Association (MLA) Style

Reference:

United States. Federal Emergency Management Agency. Course Number, Course Name. Emmitsburg: Emergency Management Institute, date.

In-Text:

(Emergency Management Institute, date, page number*)

American Psychological Association (APA) Style

Reference:

U.S. Federal Emergency Management Agency. (date). Course Name (Course Number). Emmitsburg, MD: Emergency Management Institute.

In-Text:

(Emergency Management Institute, date, page number*)

* Note: Use page numbers only when directly quoting material, omit the page number when paraphrasing material.