Higher Education Updates

Message from Wendy Walsh, Higher Education Program Manager

As you can all imagine, the Higher Education Program is buzzing as we address the final Symposium preparations! It is abundantly clear to me that the emergency management higher education community of interest is incredibly professional, generous and caring, and the event would not have reached this level of excellence without you!

We currently have 312 people registered to come, and this is only a fraction of our community, so we are working hard to capture and disseminate all we can! This year we will be video recording all the plenary sessions and are planning to making them available. We will also have copies of the breakout session briefs and hope the dialogue will inspire connection and more collaboration throughout the coming year.

If you are unable to make it this year, please make time to review the agenda and let us know if we can provide you with additional session information. You can also virtually track our community social media posts by searching for #EMhighered during the symposium and the weeks following. We will certainly capture some highlights in our next newsletter and discuss the next steps during our community call June 16th. Looking forward to seeing many of you soon!
