Higher Education Updates

Message from Wendy Walsh, Higher Education Program Manager

This past week, we graduated the fourth cohort of our National Emergency Management Executive Academy. This experience was nothing less than outstanding! The caliber and diversity of the executive participants resulted not only in rich and fascinating dialogue, but also in the creation and delivery of impactful capstone projects. There were five capstone briefs which were presented to FEMA leadership: Are we Prepared Yet? The Ongoing Quest to Assess and Measure Preparedness; Applying High Reliability Organization Theory to Emergency Management; Emergency Management Leadership in 2030: Shaping the Next Generation Meta-Leader; An Operational Review of the National Association of State Chief Information Officers Cyber Disruption Response Planning Guide; and, The Role of Public-Private Partnerships in Emergency Management. If you are interested in learning more about the capstones, please email me. I would love to see these and future capstone products leveraged in classrooms to inspire discussion and further analysis.

This past Friday, I attended the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) Education Fair at DHS Headquarters in Washington D.C. to share our program capabilities. The focus of this event was to provide DHS employees opportunities for education. At the gathering, I connected with the DHS Chief Learning Officer, Patrick Newman, to discuss coordinating DHS-wide efforts to support emergency management and homeland security education. I also had the opportunity to meet with several FEMA employees to discuss opportunities to support greater coordination in higher education outreach and employment.

This week, I have continued to work with our higher education community to support the DHS Homeland Security Academic Advisory Council's (HSAAC) upcoming National Table Top Exercise (NTTX) for Institutions of Higher Education, November 16-18, 2017 at the University of Illinois at Chicago. This 2-day event will focus on addressing challenges and good practices in planning, preparing and promoting resilience in the face of campus violence, including active shooter and other threats. I have been serving on the planning team and working with colleagues to create meaningful engagement opportunities for emergency management and homeland security students. If you have not already extended an invitation to your school leadership, I encourage you to do so. This is a great opportunity to explore capabilities, learn from each other and collaborate.
