Adelphi University, Garden City - Online Master of Science in Emergency Management

Adelphi’s innovative Master of Science in Emergency Management degree consists of a 39 credit program of study that culminates in an emergency management capstone research project and presentation. The degree program has been designed for both new bachelor’s degree graduates and working professionals with a busy life and career responsibilities. Students may study full time or part time and can complete the program 100% online.

Students complete a 33 credit core curriculum by completing required emergency management courses through the University College and additional coursework at the University’s internationally accredited School of Business. Students then choose from one of three elective tracks: Environmental Studies, Health or Government. Students complete their education by developing and implementing a comprehensive Capstone project that represents their first scholarly contribution to the field of emergency management.
