

Tulane University – Masters of Professional Studies in Security Management

The Master of Professional Studies (MPS) in Security Management at the Tulane School of Professional Advancement can help you take the lead in today's growing security sector. Gain the practical skills required to protect businesses and corporations from terrorism, criminal acts, and disasters, learning online and earning a master's degree on your schedule.

As a security studies graduate, you'll be ready to pursue a career as:

Risk Management Analyst
Corporate Security Director or Manager
Director of University and School Security and Preparedness
Director of Hospital Security and Preparedness
Director of Athletic or Event Security
Director of Business Continuity
Security Analyst or Manager

Courses in this program are available entirely online!

The MPS consists of nine core courses, one elective, and one capstone course. Core courses cover a range of academic disciplines such as risk management and threat assessment, emergency management administration, corporate security, and physical protection systems.

After successfully completing the nine core courses and one elective, students complete a capstone. This course synthesizes the full range of knowledge, skills, and abilities students developed over the entirety of their security management studies. You will integrate and apply key concepts through a business-based project, developing a proposal and conducting this project at a business or local government sector entity.

Course Requirements:

- Introduction to Emergency Management
- Business Continuity
- Sport/Event Security and Response
- Risk Management and Threat Assessment
- Emergency Management Administration
- Cyber Threats and Homeland Security
- Corporate Security
- Physical Protection Systems
- Leadership in Security Management
- Financial Security
- Elective (choose one):
 - o Intelligence Analysis and Critical Thinking
 - o Homeland Security and Approaches to Counter-Terrorism
 - o Disaster Communications
- Capstone

Classes in the MPS in Emergency Management launch in January 2019, pending approval from the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS).
