

University of Maryland, Baltimore County – Graduate Certificate in Emergency Management

The University of Maryland, Baltimore County offers a Graduate Certificate in Emergency Management within the Masters of Science in Emergency Health Services. The program is developed with a focus on preparing professionals for leadership roles requiring skill in planning, research, development, and organizational operations. Five courses (15 total credits) are required for completion of the certificate, with two others courses highly recommended as supplemental and related material. All courses are available in an online section via web-based distance education, or as a hybrid section which includes weekly on-campus seminars for those students within driving distance. These seminars are also broadcast and recorded for all enrolled students in both sections via Blackboard Collaborate.

The certificate can be taken as a stand-alone program or concurrently with the Masters of Science Degree in Emergency Health Services.
