

Immaculata University – Bachelor of Science in Emergency Planning and Management

Immaculata University's Emergency Planning and Management bachelor's degree-completion program is designed primarily for working adults. The accelerated delivery format allows students to create customized schedules that involve both classroom and on-line courses. Courses are taught in a blended format and are completed in seven- or eight-week terms. The program's goal is to produce graduates who are proficient in:

- Anticipating hazards and problems that may arise from an emergency in order to plan and respond effectively.
- Making decisions, identifying the strengths and weaknesses of possible solutions, as well as the costs and benefits of each action.
- Writing and communicating professionally, particularly emergency preparedness plans, to inform communities, other agencies and the public.
- Working with other organizations, government officials, and the general public to coordinate emergency responses.
- Leading successfully to ensure effective responses to emergencies by organizing and providing direction to a variety of people.
